

The Chiseler
Randy Swift 10/25/04

A young man watched an idol maker bring his hammer down.
He sang a workman's tune as the chips fell to the ground.
He saw the young man watching he thought he'd have some fun.
He taunted him and asked him "What has your God done?"
The young man started smiling the workman knew not why.
So he stood up on both feet to look the young man in the eye.
And when the answer came it was a shot right through his heart.
He was not ready for these words the young man did impart...

He said He made the Chisel, The Chiseler, The Hammer & The Stone!
The God of all creation is the one that I call on!
The one who'll still be God when all the other god's are gone!
He made the Chisel, The Chiseler, The Hammer & The Stone...

The workman stood there silent at the answer so profound.
He turned loose of his hammer and it fell down to the ground.
The spirit did bear witness the words had hit their mark.
That idol maker saw the light and came out of the dark.
That young man led him to the Lord just like a good man should.
There he introduced him to the master of the wood.
And when the foreman came to make his rounds that afternoon.
He found his workman idle and singing a different tune...

About the Chisel, The Chiseler, The Hammer and The Stone
The God of all creation is the one that he calls on
The one who'll still be God when all the other gods are gone
He made The Chisel, The Chiseler, The Hammer and The Stone.
